

Opposition to Jeff. Davis's Rule—The Merrimack Reported Ready for Action—Porter's Fleet Rallied for the Southwest Pass.

New York, 27th. A few days since the pickets along the lower Potomac and Chesapeake Bay were drawn in by General Hooker. The rebel sympathizers in lower Maryland took this as an intimation that the United States forces were about to leave, and immediately commenced to send slaves to Virginia for the rebel army. General Hooker ordered the arrest of six or eight of the ringleaders who are among the most prominent citizens in that section.

The World's Washington despatch says an individual named Pollock reached here to-day from Culpeper county, Virginia, near where the rebel army now lies. He is known as a reliable and intelligent man. He states that the rebels are in the vicinity of which he came there is a local insurrection among the white people, who are bitter in opposition to Jeff. Davis's rule. The people feel that the rebel cause is hopelessly lost since the retreat from the stronghold at Manassas. The rebel defeat at Winchester also depressed the Virginians, and they are now in a condition to support the Union cause. The public sentiment that portion of the army which was not engaged. He doubts whether the rebels will have pick to make a stand at Gordonsville.

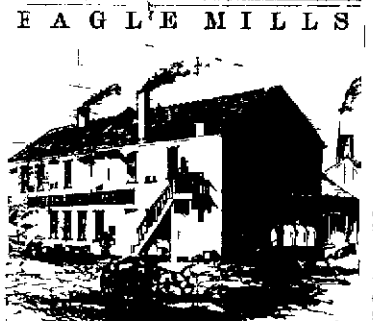

Baltimore, 27th. The following was accidentally overlooked in the Fort Monroe accounts last night. Contrabands state that the Merrimack having been fully repaired, was brought out of the dry dock on Monday morning, and that her crew was on board, ready for action. Several new gunners had also been placed on board of her of heavier metal than she had before. The steamers Jamestown and Yorktown were sent to have been greatly strengthened, and repaired, and are ready to accompany the Merrimack. The flag of the former, with the colors of the pennant, was flying when they left.

Fortress Monroe, 27th. Three deserters arrived to-day from the south side of James river, belonging to a South Carolina regiment, who stated that the Merrimack had been fully repaired and was ready to attack Fort Monroe for the past three days. A rebel gunboat Jamestown made a run to the south side of the river, and was seen to be firing at the fort.

Deserters represent a great panic among the rank and file, on account of rumors of Union failures. The newspapers are carefully kept from them, so they have been imposed upon so often with false statements of rebel victories, that they are much dissatisfied. They say that during the excitement in Norfolk immediately after the fall of Roanoke Island, it was believed that a demand had been made, General Huger would have capitulated.

The steamer Constitution, from Ship Island, arrived last night. Commodore Porter's fleet sailed on the 16th for the Southwest Pass. Commodore Farragut's fleet of sloops of war and gunboats would sail on the 17th for the same destination.

The French steamers Calmet and Gessendi, have taken a position within 200 yards of the Monitor. Private advices from London, of the 16th, state that Mr. Field and other gentlemen and capitalists interested in the Atlantic telegraph enterprise were to meet Lord Palmerston on the 15th and the prospects of a satisfactory settlement of negotiations with the British government are in regard to raising the necessary capital to secure the proposed cable, were of a very satisfactory character. Mr. Field confidently expected to return to New York at an early day, with assurances of the earnest co-operation of the British government in the great work.

St. Louis, 27th.

A special despatch to the Republican dated near Island No. 10 on the evening of the 26th says that only 8 shells were thrown by the mortar boats to-day, to which the rebels made no reply.

This morning Colonel Buford made a reconnaissance with 20 men of the 27th Illinois regiment down the Missouri shore. They arrested a prominent citizen who reports that 2,000 negroes are employed on the Island and at the batteries along the shore, that 85 rebel troops, including two lieutenants and 40 negroes have been killed by our shells, that the upper shore battery has been abandoned, but others are being strengthened. That the enemy is 15,000 strong, and that their encampments have been moved entirely out of the range of our guns.

The rebels are confident of success and say they have a good road to Trenton and other points by which they can escape whenever they choose. They have plenty of provisions and are waiting the shore to prevent communication from here. The total number of the enemy's transports is eleven.

Two or three small gunboats have been seen by Capt. Blair, but the weather was too thick for further observation.

One of the partly finished gunboats at Memphis was fired the other night, but the fire was extinguished before much damage was done. The new Tennessee levee was disbanding and refusing to fight with the pikes, which were the only weapons offered these.

A special despatch to the Tribune contains the following: A gentleman arrived on the Connecticut this morning, with intelligence from Island No. 10 up to the 26th of the day. He reports that the rebels are in the vicinity of which he came there is a local insurrection among the white people, who are bitter in opposition to Jeff. Davis's rule. The people feel that the rebel cause is hopelessly lost since the retreat from the stronghold at Manassas. The rebel defeat at Winchester also depressed the Virginians, and they are now in a condition to support the Union cause. The public sentiment that portion of the army which was not engaged. He doubts whether the rebels will have pick to make a stand at Gordonsville.

The first thing I noticed when I stepped out of the car was the smell of fresh asphalt and the sound of birds chirping in the distance. It felt like I had entered a new world, one where the air was clean and the sky was a deep, vibrant blue. The sun was just beginning to rise, casting a warm, golden glow over the landscape. I took a deep breath, savoring the moment, and then I saw it. A small, white, two-story house with a red roof and a white picket fence in front of it. It was perfect. Just what I needed. I walked up the path that led to the house, my heart racing with excitement. I had found it. My dream home.
